Prof. Manvita Baradi has more than 25 years of technical experience in developing and administering programs for Local Governments, capacity building of Local Government Associations, urban and regional planning, citizen participation, municipal performance measurement and international development. She is the Founder Director of Urban Management Centre (UMC)—an organization working towards professionalizing urban management in India and in South Asia. UMC is a legacy organization of International City/County Management Association (ICMA's) and she has served as Director for ICMA's South Asia programs. She was the Professor and Dean of the Faculty of Management at the CEPT University from May 2013 to June 2020.

The objective of FM webinar series is to provide a forum that brings together leading practitioners, thinkers and scholars and highlights the collaborative processes involved in urban habitats and management.
